

As a professional journalist and a consumer of news I am very concerned about the weakening of laws regarding cross-ownership of media outlets. Different outlets have different views about what sort of news to cover. Insuring that our information comes from several sources is undoubtedly good for our country. Different outlets offer different perspectives. Also, we all know competition is always good for any product, especially news. News is covered with perspective. The only way to insure perspective is not enforced on the American people is to make sure different perspectives are available. Please keep these laws strong.
